Deer Park Hotel

DEER PARK, MD.
 This famous hostelry on the superb plateau of the Allegheny Mountains known as the Glades, opened June 23, after a most complete renovation of the entire property, making it new throughout. The twelve private cottages were refurbished, and the thirty-third year of this beautiful mountain resort finds it more prepossessing and enjoyable than at any time in its history.

The popularity of Deer Park is due to its desirable altitude, 2,800 feet above the sea level, out of reach of malaria and mosquitoes; an its magnificent parking of 500 acres of forest and lawn, and miles of perfectly kept roadways, affords most delightful surroundings. It is thoroughly modern as to improvements and equipment, with Bowling Alleys, Billiard Rooms, Tennis Courts, Golf Links, Swimming Pools, Livery, etc., and the delightful rooms and excellent cuisine are not surpassed. No mountain resort equals it for accessibility.

Three through trains daily via the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. For rates in hotel, annexes or cottages or illustrated booklets and floor plans, apply to W. E. BURWELL, Mgr., Deer Park, Md.

of the suffering and danger in store for her, robs the expectant mother of all pleasant anticipations of the coming event, and casts over her a shadow of gloom which cannot be shaken off. Thousands of women have found that the use of Mother's Friend during pregnancy robs confinement of all pain and danger, and insures safety to life of mother and child. This scientific liniment is a god-send to all women at the time of their most critical trial. Not only does Mother's Friend carry women safely through the perils of child-birth, but its use gently prepares the system for the coming event, prevents "morning sickness," and other discomforts of this period. Sold by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Book containing valuable information free.

A Trite Saying.

It is a trite saying that no man is stronger than his stomach. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach—puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver and kidneys to expel the poisons from the body and thus cures both liver and kidney troubles. If you take this nature-cure purifier and tonic, you will assist your system in manufacturing each day a pint of rich, red blood, that is invigorating to the brain and nerves. The blood is it often indicated by pimples or boils appearing on the skin, the face becomes sallow and the feelings "blue." Dr. Pierce's "cure" is a tonic that makes one vigorous, strong and forceful. It is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes that contains neither alcohol nor harmful habit-forming drugs, and the only one, every ingredient of which has the professional endorsement of the leading medical writers of this country. Some of these endorsements are published in a little book, which is sent from the publisher, free of charge, to anyone who sends for it. It tells just what Dr. Pierce's medicine is made of. The "Words of Praise" for the several ingredients which Dr. Pierce's medicine is composed of, by leaders in all the several schools of medical practice, and recommending them for the cure of the diseases for which the "Golden Medical Discovery" is advised, should have far more weight with the sick and afflicted than any eulogium of the so-called "medical men" who are so conspicuously flattered before the public by those who are afraid to let the ingredients of which their medicines are composed be known. Bear in mind that the "Golden Medical Discovery" has the badge of HONESTY on every bottle. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are constipation, invigorate the liver and regulate stomach and bowels. Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for one cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 21 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

THE TEETHING PERIOD.

It Does Not Necessarily Mean Sickness For the Baby.

The belief that cutting the first teeth means illness for infants is an exploded theory, according to the head physician of the Nursery and Child's hospital, who declares that there is no more reason why a healthy young child should be sick when teething than at any other time, says the New York Telegram.

"It has always been a subject of curious interest to me why the majority of mothers, and other persons, too, should think that a baby must have all kinds of ailments when getting its first teeth," he said. "Aside from being irritable, having a slight rise in temperature at morning or night, occasional disorders with the stomach and the desire to be constantly chewing on something, the normal child in good condition should be free from illness while cutting its teeth. The ailments in nine cases out of ten attributed to teething are caused from some other source, and for that reason a little one who appears to be weak and really indisposed should be placed under the care of a physician for treatment." There is no exact period at which teeth should begin to show. Some babies have them sooner than others, but if none has appeared at the end of six months I would advise a mother to consult a doctor, for by that time the normal infant should have had several. The easiest and most natural way for them to come in is pairs, though I have known many youngsters to get four at a time.

MARRIAGE.

The Development of Woman and the Passing of Matrimony.

It is woman's refusal to marry and woman's restiveness in marriage—for the immense majority of our divorces are asked for by the wife—which so alarm us today. For both these facts there is the same explanation—the character of our women is changing faster than the character of matrimony. The women of the past were as children compared with the women of today. Some few great names there always were to show what was possible to the sex, but the majority were ignorant, weak and absolutely isolated. Today in America our women are as well educated as men in many cases, often even more so, and then wide reading and general acquaintance with facts of life, past and present, together with rapidly increasing organization among them, give them a character and courage previously unknown. This change is not, as some thinkers claim, a morbid demand for masculine power and privilege. It has nothing to do with sex. It is the development of the humanness in women.—Charlotte Perkins Gilman in Harper's Bazar.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

Is an ordeal which all women approach with indescribable fear, for nothing compares with the pain and horror of child-birth. The thought of the suffering and danger in store for her, robs the expectant mother of all pleasant anticipations of the coming event, and casts over her a shadow of gloom which cannot be shaken off. Thousands of women have found that the use of Mother's Friend during pregnancy robs confinement of all pain and danger, and insures safety to life of mother and child. This scientific liniment is a god-send to all women at the time of their most critical trial. Not only does Mother's Friend carry women safely through the perils of child-birth, but its use gently prepares the system for the coming event, prevents "morning sickness," and other discomforts of this period. Sold by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Book containing valuable information free.

With Claudia's Assistance
 By INA WRIGHT HANSON
 Copyright, 1906, by E. C. Parcells

From the doorway Fitzgerald looked moodily at me from in front of the dresser. I looked moodily at Fitzgerald.

"She refused me," he said. "I've got to go to Mrs. Whiting's dinner."

Fitz nodded and threw himself heavily into a chair.

"I wouldn't go, you know, after Mrs. Whiting's niece refused me, so she had to rustle up you."

I glared at him, then jerked open the top drawer.

"Seem to me, in the interest of humanity, you might have stayed off your old proposal till after the dinner. I've got to take Miss Whiting in. What shall I say to her? I'm no society man."

"You might talk about me. It's darned strange she refuses me." Fitz responded modestly. "Of course I'm fat, but what of that? Look at my money!"

I turned from my hair brushing and regarded Fitz with surprise.

"She's different from other girls," he went on mournfully. "You never know what she is going to do or say next. She said if she ever found the man she wanted to marry and he didn't ask her she would propose to him. You say a word for me, old man, and maybe she will change her mind about it."

"All right," I said and started for the dinner table. "If I had been left in peace I could have translated a few more pages of that Latin work I was out."

Why I should have (figuratively of course) fallen on my face and worshipped Claudia Whiting the moment I saw her I don't know. That any man could help adoring her after he came to know her is incredible, but I think I began before ever she said a word to me. It couldn't be because her eyes were the bluest I ever saw or her hair crinkled sunshine—I suppose a poet would describe it better—or her lips red as the roses she wore in her belt. One day since that dinner she told me something about affluence. It may be that mysterious word holds the reason.

What we talked of is vaguely remembered. I know that I walked homeward carrying with me a vision of sweetest seriousness, for that describes Claudia as she appeared that day. When I turned the corner, beyond which were my lodgings, I saw Fitzgerald at my gate, his broad back toward me. I remembered my forgotten promise and fled inconspicuously.

Next day that dinner she told me something about affluence. It may be that mysterious word holds the reason. What we talked of is vaguely remembered. I know that I walked homeward carrying with me a vision of sweetest seriousness, for that describes Claudia as she appeared that day. When I turned the corner, beyond which were my lodgings, I saw Fitzgerald at my gate, his broad back toward me. I remembered my forgotten promise and fled inconspicuously.

"If you knew him better you would appreciate him more," I said and launched forth at some length into his peculiar graces and virtues. Claudia listened, and when I had finished she leaned toward me smiling regally. "And didn't you care about coming to see me? If it had not been for Mr. Fitzgerald you would have come anyway, wouldn't you?"

To think that she should have looked straight into my heart and discovered my perdy! I almost let go of my secret. I almost answered, "I came because I love you." And this on the second meeting.

Then because I must talk, and there were some things I must not say, I began talking of health, forcing me to live, for years in the pine forests; then when my health was restored how the woods still held me with their solitude, so that I was unhappy and ill at ease in society.

"I have quite a pretentious cabin here," I said. "In it are my books and my violin. Back of it flows a clear stream with trout waiting for me to catch them for my breakfast. Nothing is wanting there to make me entirely comfortable."

My face grew hot, for all at once I realized there was a want—a void—to be filled. That if I went back to my cabin now it would be as lacking as he body whose soul is not within.

"I was born and bred in the woods," exclaimed Claudia. "The stars look closer and bigger than they do in the cities of the lowlands. Up there in the mountains are ferny nooks and manly mists; there is water, clear, which I make me hungry this minute. Oh, I know about the woods!" Her blue eyes were shining like the stars of which she spoke.

Then she asked me about my books, and I told her of my published ones and those in contemplation—dry old ones—why should I have supposed that they would interest a young creature like her?

But I rambled on, lost in her sweet companionship, till the sun suddenly dropped out of sight, and I saw her shiver in the breeze that stirred the poplars. Then I remembered Fitz.

"Do give him another chance," I said perfunctorily as I rose to go. She looked at me seriously, but made no answer.

For the greater part of a month Fitz was away from town, and I saw Claudia nearly every day. Before going he asked my promise to say a word in his favor every time I saw her. There are limits to the duties of friendship, but I promised because I felt that he would make her a good husband. He was an honorable man and had more money than he knew what to do with. She was such a bewitching little creature, was Claudia. At the first meeting she was so sweetly serious. She had told me since that she was frightened to death of me because I knew so much. Fancy it! The day she told me, though, she was bubbling over with laughter, and I suspect she was poking fun at me in her irrepressible way. Then there was the morning when we walked together to church and she talked so quietly of holy things, and there was that last afternoon in the garden before Fitz came home.

That day it was the hardest of all to forget myself and remember Fitz. Sometimes when the tenderness of my heart would creep into my words little spots of color would come and go in her girlish face. I scarcely saw her eyes that day, the white lids dropped so insistently over their blue beauty.

At last I pulled myself together with the thought that he could do so much more for her than I, even if she could bring herself to think of me at all, and made my last earnest speech for him.

"I think I shall have to teach you to 'read poetry,'" she said. "Will you?" I asked eagerly.

"Begin on 'The Courtship of Miles Standish,'" then, she answered and ran, laughing, up the walk.

"I did the best I could for you, Fitz," I told him when he returned that evening. And I rehearsed the last speech in my mind.

"What did she say?" he demanded. "Why—she didn't say anything to that. She told me—or hinted—that my education was deficient because I had little knowledge of poetry, and she told me to begin on 'The Courtship of Miles Standish.'"

Fitz looked at me mournfully. "That's my finish then. Have you read it?" "I was just beginning."

Fitz walked heavily from the room, and I took up my new Longfellow. Short of stature he was, but strongly built and athletic.

Brown as a nut was his face, but his russet beard was already flaked with patches of snow.

Pretty good description of myself, I thought. Not exactly patches, but there were certainly threads of gray. I read on till the speech was finished, the egotistical words of Miles Standish; then I bowed my head in shame and anger. I had talked steadily of myself and my work, but she had led me on. She had no right to call me down so. Tomorrow I would go back to my cabin and forget, but yet I knew I should always remember. I was still brooding when Fitz came back.

"I don't blame you, old man," he began. "Probably you'll make her happier; but, Lord, look at my money!" I blinked at him as he settled down.

"Next day she had of bringing matters to a focus," he went on, picking up my book which lay face downward on the table. "Why, darned if I believe you've read it all!"

"I've read enough," I said resentfully. "I read what she thinks of me." One moment that blessed Fitz gazed at me, then in words of one syllable he gave me the gist of that poem—made me understand that my Claudia was impersonating the Puritan maiden in her immortal speech. "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

And to think I ever had deemed Fitzgerald stupid! I found my blessed girl in the garden, but she did not hear my approach. She was on tiptoe, trying to reach a rose which swung above her head.

"I have come to speak for myself, Claudia," I said. The dear hands ceased from their quest to hide the blushes of her sweet face. Her girlish form trembled.

"You think me bold?" she cried apprehensively. It was such a glorious affair to prove to her just what I did think of her, and it took a long time. And then she explained to me about affluence.

Some Funny Epitaphs.
 An Irishman who was very ill, when the physician told him that he must prescribe an emetic for him, said, "Indeed, doctor, an emetic will never do me any good, for I have taken several and could never keep one of them upon my stomach." An Irishman at cards, on inspecting the pool and finding it deficient, exclaimed: "Here is a shilling short. Who put it in?" A poor Irish servant maid who was left handed placed the knives and forks upon the dinner table in the same awkward fashion. Her master remarked to her that she had placed them all left handed. "Ah, true, indeed, sir," she said, "and so I have! Would you be pleased to help me to turn the table?" Doyle and Xelveton, two eminent members of the Irish bar, quarreled one day so violently that from hard words they came to hard blows. Doyle, a powerful man with the fists, knocked down Xelveton twice, exclaiming, "You scoundrel, I'll make you behave yourself like a gentleman!" To which Xelveton, rising, replied, with equal indignation: "No, sir; never! I defy you! You could not do it!"—London Spectator.

The Queer Burmans.
 One who has lived among them says: "The Burmans are a primitive people. They are a very young people. There are certain marks and signs by which physiologists can determine the relative youth or age of a race. One of these is the physical differentiation between boys and girls. In early races it is slight. As the race grows old it deepens. If you dressed a Burman boy of eighteen in a girl's dress or a Burmese girl of the same age in a boy's dress you could not distinguish quickly from false. Face and figure and voice are very similar. In as old people such as the French or the Brahmins in India a boy begins to differ from a girl very early indeed. Their faces seem almost different types. Their figures even at twice could not be disguised by any clothing. Their voices are utterly different."

 I am now prepared to take care of all special work pertaining to Auditing, Accounting, Opening and Closing Sets of Books, and Devising and Installing Systems. You can more readily negotiate capital for your enterprises through an Accountant than a Broker. Circularizing will not do today; personal solicitation is the only sure way. I have an especial clientele of capitalists throughout the section and Eastern States, where my profession as an Accountant for the past few years has brought me into touch with the wealth of these sections, and I have associates who will assist me in presenting your proposition in person. Few investors will entertain a proposition without a figured statement can be shown, illustrating actual or prospective profits, drawn up by an independent Accountant of repute, and this is the basis of any successful flotation. I have also engaged an expert stenographer to attend to the public wants along the line of stenographic work.
